INTRODUCTION

Learning languages helps reveal access to many of the diverse and unconceivable variety of cultures and histories that make up the world, and looking further than your own country can be a huge source of creative inspiration. Engaging with other cultures helps the world become a more open-minded place. Learning languages is great for sharing cultures, growing communities and understanding what is important and special to other people. This can contribute to a more peaceful, connected world by breaking down the barriers of communication and connecting us with others.

The world has always been multilingual, and the ways that we develop language learning and teaching success must take the multilingual realities of the world into account. We believe that English alone is not enough. The reality of the multilingual and multicultural society is that languages overlap and collide. From this lived experience we need to learn how to prepare people with the language skills they need for a multilingual society, and how to train people to develop the necessary sensitivity towards the cultural and linguistic needs of their fellow citizens[1].

The future of language learning promises to be exciting, become more accessible, engaging, and effective, with learners and educators adapting to new trends of personalized learning paths. Language learning is no longer one-size-fits-all, allowing for more personalized approaches. Peer-to-peer interaction is becoming a valuable part of the language teaching and learning experience. Platforms offer learners the chance to practice with native speakers around the world. These community-based platforms not only provide language exchange opportunities but also foster cultural exchange, enhancing both linguistic and cultural competence[2].

English has become the lingua franca of the modern world, significantly affecting various aspects of life, including education and culture. With advancements in technology and globalization, online platforms and language centres have emerged as valuable resources for language learning. These platforms provide interactive learning experiences, allowing individuals to develop their language skills at their own pace. English is one of the most widely spoken second language globally, making it a bridge language that connects people from different cultures and backgrounds.

Most observers now agree that English has effectively become the global language and that its role is unprecedented in world history. There is of course debate about why this has happened and about the extent to which this is or will be to the detriment of other languages. It is the reality of English as a lingua franca that we must confront today. There are also major initiatives to make English the language of instruction. This reality is shown most clearly by the language choices being made across the world. At the same time as the dominance of English has grown, our world has become more not less multilingual.

Learning other popular languages of the world is essential for meaningful communication with millions of speakers worldwide. It enables personal and professional connections that are enriched by a shared understanding and cultural exchange. Every nation is unique; this also applies to the Ukrainians. Learning a new language, like Ukrainian, challenges the brain, promotes cognitive benefits and cultural awareness. Ukrainians have an immense cultural heritage, which you can access given that you know the language. This language offers a unique perspective on the country's traditions and culture, allowing learners to appreciate the depth of Ukrainian identity and resilience. Proficiency in Ukrainian is a valuable skill offering advantages in academia, diplomacy and global business.

Although much attention has long been paid to various aspects of language learning[3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10 11 12], there is a need in a more detailed focus
